The renaissance of board games and the new social revolution

Fun, emotions, commitment and real contact with another human being. This and much more will keep us from playing board games that have been back in favour for some time.

"The generation of today's thirty-year-olds in childhood had a Chinese or Eurobusiness game board, for the agile there were chessmen, the choice was for checkers or dominoes, and here you can finish the counting while the game offer was not extensive but long hours were spent in the family circle or colleagues.

There was lots of fun at the same time. Over time, board games began to be replaced by computer games. In homes, there were various games on floppy disks and CDs, and over time also better and better consoles. Today many games are played on smartphones. Although they allow you to compete, sometimes engage the intellect, what is currently scarce is the direct contact with other human beings. This is the most powerful strength of board games, which after the twilight of the "Chinese era", once again conquer the hearts and minds of a growing army of players. Players who can look into each other's eyes because they are not in front of a computer screen. The games are diverse in terms of subject matter as well as principles, refer to movies, books, and stories. Economical, logical, adventure, war, strategic, sports, party - the choice is huge.
